THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT MEETS TO-MOR-ROW.

General Grant has a reception in Rockford to-day.

The exports of grain from Russia thus far this year are less than during the corresponding time a year ago.

A little girl in Chicago has been killed by a playmate who stabbed her with a pin, while in sport. The pin entered the girl's eye, and the inflammation resulted in death.

The Spofford Kellogg case is laid in the pigeon hole for a short rest, until the Indian bill is disposed of. This will give the Democrats a breathing spell between rounds, as they were knocked out of wind by Blaine's hard hits.

Cincinnati's Common Council has been soused. They refused permission to erect poles to carry wires to the meeting place of the Democratic Convention, and the Court being applied to, issued the needed permission, and now work will be commenced.

The resolution introduced in the House of Representatives authorizing the Secretary of War to loan arms, tents, etc., to the Soldier's Reunion Committee of the Northwest, has been reported on favorably by the Committee on Military Affairs to whom it was referred.

A Washington correspondent, who has been busy with the figures, asserts that the savings bank of Massachusetts and New York, and W. H. Vanderbilt, own one-eighth of all the bonded debt of the United States, and estimates that more than one-half of the entire national debt is owned in New England.

During the first three months of this year there arrived in New York 135,000 emigrants, three times as many as during the corresponding months last year. One day last week the arrival at Castle Garden were 4,263. It is estimated that the aggregate immigration will this year reach 500,000, the highest number in any previous year being in 1872, when it reached 440,000. It is also estimated that the emigrants will bring this year to this country, cash amounting to from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000.

man. Sherman delegates were elected.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28—The inquest of De Young was concluded last night, and a verdict of murdered by Kalloch rendered.

only fired. General satisfaction is felt at the result.

POLITICAL COLLISION.

Special to the Gazette.
LEADVILLE, April 28—A collision occurred in the City Council tonight, over the contested seat, a Republican being elected and a Democrat seated. The Republicans left the room in great confusion.
The officers drew revolvers demanding order; several of the audience drew revolvers, but quiet was restored at last.

OHIO.

The Complexion of the Republican Convention Which Assembles Today.

COLUMBUS, April 27—The Republican State Convention to-morrow will be one of the largest and possibly one of the most exciting ever held in the State. All the leading politicians are here, and all are greatly interested. The battle as fought at the primaries and in the county conventions has been earnest and exciting beyond precedent, but the situation as it stands tonight has few problematical elements in it.

The convention will be in the control of the Sherman men. All concede this, but there are differences of opinion as to how far they will care to go, or to be allowed to go, without causing the minority to play the part of obstructionists. Mr Sherman's friends claim that the Secretary will have in the convention 470 delegates.
They concede 270 to Blaine, and count thirty scattering. The more moderate men give Blaine 200 delegates, and the control of three Congressional districts out of twenty.
The Blaine men insist that their candidate will have 250 delegates, with the control of six Congressional districts.

will veto what is known as the immediate

THE MINISTRY.

"Lord Beaconsfield took leave of the Queen yesterday. The following appointments have finally been made: Duke of Argyll, Lord Privy Seal; Earl Kimberley, Secretary of State for the Colonial Department; John Bright, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; the Marquis of Ripon, Viceroyalty of India. (He was offered the Viceroyalty of either Ireland or India.)" ment.

THE MURDER.

Desire of the Assassins that the Subject Shall Not be Agitated.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27—The following letter to Mayor Kalloch from the son who shot De Young, is published today:

DEAR FATHER: You don't need any advice, I know, but there is an impression in my mind, stronger, perhaps, than any other, that recent events have so cleared away the rubbish that nothing ought to be said in public about the color of past events. It looks to me as if the record would now be made anew, and unbecomingly in the future will mark its author. If the Alta and Chronicle can get folks to reply to them, they will have a measure of excuse for continuing the old war. It will take two years to continue the agitation for the benefit of these papers. Our appeal on everything is to the people on general issue, letting personal opposition take care of itself.
Yours, I. M. K.

To this note Mr. Kalloch said: I fully sympathize with the sentiments of my son, and had fully decided on the course he advises. While Charles De Young was alive I had no other course than to answer him and his allies, and hurl back their aspersions with all the energy of which they were capable; but he has gone to his last account, and gone under circumstances so overwhelmingly calamitous to myself and family that on their account, as well as that of the community, I have no more answer to make. My personal warfare is ended; my avenge is laid in his grave, and in that grave I bury my revenge. I shall continue faithfully to do my duty, both as mayor and minister, and save the future of myself and family to the favor of God and the impartial sentiment of the people. When they make up the record I have no fear of what it will be.

GENERAL KEY.

The Vacant Tennessee Judgeship to be Filled by the Appointment of General Key.

WASHINGTON, April 27—Judge Trigg, of the United States Court for the District of Tennessee, died last Sunday. There is a strong effort being made to have Postmaster General Key fill the vacancy, as he is known to be one of the best lawyers in Tennessee and in every way well fitted for this position. It seems to be the desire of lawyers and others of both parties that he have the place, as the district embraces an old home and the scene of his early practice and subsequent judgeship. It is believed that there will be no opposition whatever to his appointment, should the President tender him the position and he consent to accept it.

OBITUARY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. April 27—The Hon.
John Robbins, ex-member of Congress, died in this city to-day of congestion of the lungs, aged 72 years.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 27—Dr. Joseph T.
Webb, a brother of the wife of President Hayes, and a brother-in-law of Hon. Stanley Matthews, died suddenly of apoplexy in this city this morning. He complained at the breakfast table this morning of not feeling well as usual, and went down town to consult a physician, for whom he left a message and returned to his boarding place, where he was stricken with apoplexy at 10 o'clock, and died in a few hours later. Dr. Webb was born in Chillicothe, O., and was 53 years of age. He was educated in the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, and afterward studied medicine in the medical college, Cincinnati, where he was later a professor and lecturer on anatomy. He practiced medicine in Cincinnati for a long time. He went into the army as a surgeon, and belonged to the general staff corps, and at the close of the war went to Europe, where he studied his profession in the colleges of Vienna and Paris for three years, after which he was appointed superintendent of the Long View Lunatic Asylum, where he became possessed with malaria, from which he has been endeavoring to free his system since his retirement. He came to Minnesota about two years ago, and his health had gradually improved. He married a sister of Stanley Matthews twenty years ago, who survives him, and was with him at the time of his death. The remains will be taken to Cincinnati for interment to-morrow evening.

SUICIDE.

MILWAUKEE, April 27—A barber named Stephen Liebenstein, residing at the corner of Fond du Lac avenue and Thirteenth street, who has had domestic troubles, got an old sloop-pail last night, sat down in front of it, placed his feet in the pail, and then took a razor and slashed his feet, with the intention of bleeding himself to death.
It is presumed that death came too slowly from the effects of the wounds in the feet, for Liebenstein afterwards made a wretched job of throat cutting, severing the windpipe and nearly one-half the throat. The suicide's efforts, however, were at last successful, for this morning he was found dead in his chair. Liebenstein was over 50 years of age.

THE MACON CYCLONE.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. April 27—The Appeal's Macon, Miss., special says: "A meeting of citizens was called by the Mayor today to adopt some plan of relief for the sufferers from the effects of the cyclone Sunday night. A relief committee was appointed to raise funds to repair losses, provide food, raiment and shelter. The committee have 203 on their list who are absolutely destitute. Some have not a piece of clothing nor bread."

DEATH-BED CONFESSION.

CINCINNATI, April 27—William P. Gillespie, of Columbus, Ind., on his death bed a few days ago, made a confession that he and two others, names not given, killed a wealthy stockholder named James Jamieson ten years ago, and divided between them a large sum of money found on his person. Jamieson's body was never found, and this is the first clue to his manner of death.

NOT RECOVERED.

SHELBYVILLE, April 17—The bodies of the three children of George Compton, who were drowned Sunday evening, have not yet been recovered. About one hundred persons have been dragging the river continuously since Sunday. His wife, Elizabeth Compton, whom he saved from a watery grave, died this morning from injuries received in her struggle to save herself and children. His five horses were drowned.
The children were aged 10, 12 and 15 years respectively.

THE FINANCES.

WASHINGTON, April 27—In conversation to-day with your correspondent, Secretary Sherman took a very hopeful view of the national finances. He says that the revenues this month have averaged $1,000,000 a day, and that the surplus for April would be between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

THE INDIANS.

WASHINGTON, April 27—The Senate dropped the Louisiana case to-day and took up the Indian appropriation bill, which provoked the inevitable discussion of the whole Indian question, which this bill always calls out.

ACQUITTED.

CHICAGO, April 28—The Greenbaum embezzlement case ended yesterday afternoon the accused being acquitted.

An Elephant's Hot Oaks.

This story is from a letter written by a gentleman in India. The writer says:
"One day two ladies were watching some elephants being fed near their camp in the jungle of the Central Provinces, when the elder of the herd took into her head to offer one of the elephants a very hot chapatti, which is a cake made of flour and baked on the fire over a thin plate and consequently, when fresh made, is burning hot.
Elephants are usually fed with these twice a day, but they are always allowed to cool before being given. This one was still so hot that it burnt the elephant's trunk, for he dropped it with the quickness of lightning and with a shout, at the same time striking a blow on the hand of the lady. Had she been but a little nearer and the best not at the full length of his chain, the same blow on the head would certainly have killed her on the spot. As it was her hand was in a most painful state for weeks afterwards. Next morning, when we went to start for the next encampment, this same lady, who usually got up the ladder first and sat nearest to the elephant's head, proceeded to do as usual, but as she approached the elephant he began to trumpet and throw water over her. This he did several times, till at last she had to give up trying to ascend, and another lady took her place. The elephant, however, permitted her to sit near his tail, but he remained cross all day."

The Problem of Suicide.

Two young Englishmen were going ashore in a boat from a merchant vessel in a Chinese port. One of the two had levied his revolver for amusement, at some object on the beach, when, just as he pulled the trigger, the other leaped across and received the whole charge in his head. As soon as the poor fellow saw that he had killed his friend, he put the pistol to his own brow and led dead by his side. Was he right, or splendidly wrong? This happened in A. D. 1880, and about the year 550 B. C. Adrastus, the son of Georgias, the son of Midas, having first killed his own brother by accident at home, and then with a javelin aimed at a wild boar, the favorite son of his kind patron Cronus, who was a by a dream, had placed his darling under his special charge, waited until there was silence and solitude after that most lamentable funeral, and "knowing within himself that of all men he ever heard of he was the most burdened with calamities, slew himself upon the tomb."

Dear Sirs—Last Sabbath I was at Fond

A Miner's Secret.

From the Denver Republican.

A number of old residents of Denver remember a venerable Scotch mountaineer by the name of McDonald, who came to the city three or four times during the war with a small donkey, carrying his personal effects and several buckskin bags well filled with gold dust. On such occasions he would deposit in some of the banks not less than $1500 to $18,000. McDonald was a very social and lively old fellow, but never would reveal the place where he got his gold. Several men undertook to follow him secretly to learn where he was going, but all came back without knowing any more than when they started. For McDonald each time contrived to throw them off the trail, and the men reported that they invariably lost all traces of him near the White river, after following him through the Ute Pass near the Middle Park.

Wenener McDonald came to Denver he would stop with a Frenchman named Baptiste, and the two were great friends. One day the Frenchman disappeared on one of his sudden trips to the mountains, which he took so much pains to keep secret, and it was noticed that Baptiste had gone too. But they had not departed in company, and hence it was surmised that the Frenchman had followed McDonald with a view of spying up on the movements of the old man and ferreting from what secret mine in the mountains he drew his wealth. The two men never returned, and though eight years have since passed away, none of the Denver friends ever heard of them again. About two years ago the gentleman to whom the Republican is indebted for the above particulars met Baptiste on the street. He found him a more sullen man, and when asked what had become of his old Scotch friend, gruffly answered that he did not know, and turned away. The recent marvelous reports from North Park, taken in connection with the above facts, form a stronger ground for the belief that McDonald passed through the Ute Pass, through Middle Park and into the North Park, and years ago discovered the rich deposits, the existence of which is only now beginning to be suspected.

A Tomb for a Day.

One of the most thrilling adventures in the annals of mining happened at the Zinc mine, near Jackson, Cal., on Wednesday last. At the morning shift, Niclaus Nee, an Italian, with a number of other miners, went to work on the 2400 level. No, it seems, was separated from his companions. They had been at work but a few minutes when the promontory symptoms of a coming cave, such as the cracking of timbers and falling of small pieces of rock, told them that it was time to seek for quarters. In withdrawing they were not forgetful of Nee, shouting to him to get out of danger's way. He however did not realize the nature of the trouble. The crisis of his comrades conveyed the idea that something was wrong, and he retreated toward the face of the tunnel. No miner had he got out of the way than the crash came. One half of the ledge next to the hanging wall came down with a thundering sound, crushing the heavy timbers like match sticks, and casting, involving about thirty feet along the ledge, a large and off track barrier. Nee and his companions and liberty. It was not long before the awful nature of the situation dawned upon Nee. He was cut off in the tunnel a lone prisoner in one of the recesses of the mine, with hundreds of tons of rock clanking out the only possible outlet from his cell. From the cave the tunnel was sixty feet in length, which would afford air for a day or two. He was well provided with candles, having two or three with him, and he began to contemplate the prospect of having to subsist by eating them. Meantime the rescued miners had communicated with Superintendent Rice, and within fifteen minutes a hundred men were picking a tunnel to the rescue. About 7 o'clock in the evening an aperture was made, and Nee crawled out of his tomb for a day.

TEMPERANCE TALK.

Last evening D. Allen, of Rochester, N. Y., gave a temperance lecture in Lippins' hall. The audience was not large, and the majority of those present were old friends and acquaintances of the speaker, who sought thus to give encouragement to him in his efforts to again reform. The personal experiences which Mr. Allen has had in battling the tempter, have been sufficiently varied and bitter, to cause him to realize the practical side of the question which he is handling, and to make him an enthusiastic advocate of total abstinence. Those who expected to hear "a second Gough," were disappointed, for Mr. Allen is far from that, but he is an earnest, fluent talker, and one who is more than ordinarily fitted for public speaking. His audience listened attentively, and at times greeted him with applause. He made his lecture interesting by anecdote and illustration, and stated some strong points against the liquor traffic. In closing he assured his old friends that he should attempt to make a record for himself which should secure for himself a full return of their confidence, and thanked them for their presence and attention. It is to be really hoped that Mr. Allen will continue firm in the path of sobriety, which he has been plodding along for some months past, among difficulties which none can know except one who has gone through similar experiences, and that he may continue to battle for others as well as for himself.

BETTER THAN EVER.

We are told by Britton & Kimball that their trade was never as large at this time of year, as now, and by the way the gods are being sent out of there, we judge they haven't stretched the truth a single stitch. To-day we stepped in to look at an elegant parlor set which they had just got in. It was one of the finest we ever saw, and was one of those kind of sets which people would gaze and stare at by the hour, if placed in an exposition. Their second floor, where they have many of their rich goods, is indeed a dazzler, and is a show which would be worth seeing, even if admission was charged. We hadn't more than got through admiring that new parlor set, before we noticed that the delivery wagon had been filled up with another load of goods, and more goods were being put in shape for delivery. They have won out on the delivery horse with hard work, and have a fresh one now, but business can't stop for horseflesh.

BURR ROBBINS.

A Full and Accurate Description of His Terrible Injuries.

One of the Most Wonderful Victories of Life Over Death and Mind Over Matter.

Truth Stranger than Fiction.

The terrible injuries which Burr Robbins received on the 18th of January, and which at the time were considered fatal, have been so far overcome, and have resulted so strangely different from the public expectation, as to render the case one, the details of which will be perused over and over again with interest. The full extent of the injuries and their result could not at the time of the frightful accident be given as fully and accurately as now, and we are assured that many of our readers will find in the following, many features of the case, not before known to them, which will be read with strange interest now that the excitement of the event has somewhat passed, and the anxious suspense of friends has been greatly lessened.

The Surgeon's Notes.

The following is a brief description of his injuries as we have them from the notes of the surgeon, who attended him, anatomical and surgical terms having been avoided:

"His head was crushed between the timber of the bridge and the upright boiler of the boat, the flange of the boiler coming in contact with the head just under the arch of the right eye brow, tearing the scalp and tissues covering the skull, from a point two inches back of and just above the right eye, across the forehead immediately below the eyebrows, to a point beyond the outer angle of the left eye. The frontal bone, forming the forehead and part of the top of the head, a bone seven and one-half inches in length by five and one-half inches in width, was broken from its connections with the other bones of the head, along the course of the sutures, on a line running from the outer corners of the eyes in the direction of the ears, and transversely across the top of the head. This bone, covered by the scalp, was elevated in front more than two inches, and could be readily raised and lowered like the lid of a box, the scalp across the top of the head serving as a hinge. The front part of the brain was torn from its resting place and elevated from one half to three-fourths of an inch. The bones forming the orbits of both eyes and upper part of the nose, and the right temporal bone were crushed into fragments, and those portions forming the outer angle of the right eye, the upper surface of the orbit and floor of the skull, in front, and the partition between the eyes, and the upper part of the bones of the nose, were removed. Seven of the bones removed are here represented natural size:

"The right temporal bone was crushed in and depressed, and fragment No. 4 was removed and the depressed portions elevated. The fragment No. 2, forming the upper and inner part of the orbit, was driven through the coverings of the brain, and nearly buried in the brain substance, and portions of the lacerated brain oozed out when the bone was removed."

"The bones of the upper jaw, forming the face and nose, were separated from their connections with the other bones of the head, on a line commencing just back of the eyes and running downward towards the throat, and were displaced to the left. This fracture was more difficult to adjust, and gave rise to more suffering and inconvenience during recovery than were experienced from his other injuries. The scalp was cut through across the back and left side of the head three and one-half inches in extent, and the skull fractured and depressed at that point."

"Some twenty minutes elapsed after Mr. Robbins' injuries before surgical assistance was rendered, and the excessive hemorrhage during the time and the violent shock to the system from the crushing of the head, indicated an immediate fatal result. The mass of clotted blood, which had accumulated between the brain and the elevated portion of the skull, and also under the front part of the brain, were removed and all the bleeding vessels secured."

"The fragments of the bones forming the arch of the left eye, the upper part of the nose and right side of the head, that were not denuded of their periosteum, or immediate covering, were placed in position as accurately as possible, and the frontal bone brought down nearly to its natural position, and adjusted to them. The edges of the torn scalp were brought together with sutures, leaving an opening on the side of the head and another on the upper part of the nose, in which a drainage tube was placed, extending under the front part of the brain for the purpose of allowing the blood and serum a free escape."

"Owing in a great measure to Mr. Robbins possessing an unusual amount of vital vigor and will power, reaction commenced within a few hours after the accident, and within thirteen hours was well established. On the second day after the accident his head was swelled immensely, and large quantities of serum began to escape through the drainage tube. The quantity of serum poured out varied from thirteen to twenty ounces during each twenty-four hours, for seven days. He was unable to open his eyes for twenty-two days, and for seventeen days applications of ice, or ice water, were applied to his head uninterruptingly. For three weeks he could not occupy a recumbent position, and for six weeks all his food and drink were taken through a tube, in a fluid state, as he was unable to open his mouth or use his jaws. Fragments of extruded bones were frequently removed, through the openings left in the head, until April 3, when the discharge ceased, and the openings were closed. During the first five weeks there were frequent wandering delirium and hallucinations when the mind was in a paralytic state; but when he was fully aroused, and the will power exerted, his mental equilibrium seemed but little disturbed. While his wounds were being dressed, the pressure on the brain, made with a sponge to check the hemorrhage from the torn blood vessels, would cause him to suddenly cease talking, and he would remain unconscious until the pressure was removed, when he would resume the subject, and complete sentences just were not finished when the pressure was applied."

"Mr. Robbins seems to ignore all the usual laws relating to injuries and their results, and still lives in good mental and physical condition. There is slightly impaired vision of the right eye, and inability to distinguish colors. The vision of the left eye is perfect, and he can see well with either eye separately, but in using them both at the same time, objects are blurred and indistinct."

"The hearing of the left ear is impaired, and the sense of smell obliterated. There is much suffering, and many uncomfortable feelings resulting from the injury to the nerves of the upper jaw, and the use of the upper teeth is quite painful. Nervous sensations are nearly lost on most of the forehead and upper part of the face."

"His indomitable energy and ambition have been checked for a period of four months, and as he considers brain more essential than skill in running a saw, he will soon be before the public again in his usual capacity."

A Seemingly Miracle.

Many a word is spoken in jest and it has again been proved. When Burr Robbins, as he lay upon his seeming death-bed, facetiously remarked that if he got well he would be the biggest wonder of his whole town, he bespoke a truth which is self-evident now that he has survived such terrible injuries as those described in the surgeon's notes given above. Without stretching words or consciousness, he certainly is the marvel of marvels and wonder of wonders, for in many respects his case is one which has no precedent or parallel. Every detail containing the nature of his injuries, and their result, has been eagerly sought for. The progress of the case has not only been anxiously watched by family and friends, but by all those interested in the seeming miracles, and whatever the wires reach or the mailbag travels, there are those who still inquire for further news concerning him. The public seems not to weary in discussing the mental and physical phenomena, which have accompanied this wonderful struggle of life and death of mind and matter. Unlike the many marvelous stories which find their way into print, his case is one which is verified by the best professional skill, and the close observation of those who have watched him hour by hour and day by day. Its record may be read in the leading medical journals, and still its miraculous features stagger the belief, and prove a sphinx even to philosophers and scientists, and the double enigma seems still unsolved, how a man could survive such terrible injuries, and stranger still, how he could throughout all the fierce combat with death, keep his mind as clear as in health, and all his mental faculties under complete control.

That well nigh fatal ride upon his little propeller on the 18th of January, 1890, is no blank or blurred remembrance to him. Strange beyond all explanation it seems that amid all the wild confusion of the sudden collision with the bridge, amid the shouts, and hurrying of footsteps, the rushing waters and fast sinking boat, Mr. Robbins, with his head and brain bruised, broken and bleeding, still kept his mind as clear as sunlight, and his hold upon the helm of reason did not even tremble. With a sudden and strange thoughtfulness he himself quickly dashed the cooling river water upon his crushed forehead, washing the wide gaping wounds, and the very brain itself which lay bare to the touch. Help coming, he was quickly drawn up by a rope to the bridge above, and hurriedly taken, in a carriage to a surgeon's office. Weakened by the loss of blood and by the sickening realization of most horrible injuries, he still retained control of all his mental faculties, though the seat of reason and of thought had been crushed as in a vice, his head having been jammed and broken almost beyond recognition."

With such injuries it was evident he must die, yet with the head thus crushed, with the brain thus mangled, Mr. Robbins' intellect was not even shadowed, and despite the blood and shock, he seemed to have a charmed and miraculous control upon reason. He was told he must die, but death had no terrors, and he greeted the inevitable with a calm manliness, which no bravado can ever counterfeit. Wife and friends were soon beside him, and with them he talked as coolly as though about to start on a long journey. To his attorney he dictated his last will and wish, and his mind showed forth the clearness and calmness of a summer's morning. All of this time the surgeon and his attendants were examining and caring for that terribly crushed head. The pulse sank lower and lower, the breath grew more feeble, and it was whispered, "He is sinking." "He is going," but reason still enthroned, and thought found expression in words. In the midst of the physical crash and ruin, the mind still held complete sway."

Removed to the hotel, physician and friends watched for the coming on of that stupor into which he must fall never to wake again. In the adjacent corridors many other friends, waited until the daylight, tremblingly expecting each time the door of his room opened, that it would be whispered "He is gone." But neither stupor nor death came. The crushed sickened brain was given sleep, and the morning light greeted life still lingering, and a sound mind still master of a shattered body. Hope took a feeble hold on the future, and timidly began to count hours, where it had counted minutes, but the hours passed into a day, and another night."

Amid sufferings of body which no pen can picture, amid all the various changes incident to such a fearful struggle for life, Mr. Robbins not only kept his intellectual and reasoning faculties all under his control, but used them for the very practical purposes of managing his business and giving directions not only to matters of great importance, but to many details which would have escaped the memory and attention of most men in health. Though forbidden by his physician to use or excite his mind, he would often test it for his own satisfaction, would make mathematical calculations, would recall events, and would issue orders concerning his business, and was a continual puzzle to those who watched the perfect workings of a mind, the physical casket of which had been so crushed into fragments."

Slowly the battle been fought, and to-day Mr. Robbins sits in his own home, and with the same mental vigor which his injuries failed to weaken, continues to manage all of the departments and all of the details of his mammoth show enterprise, never halting for a day, even when shattered and suffering, laid down the reins."

That a man could survive such injuries, the mere recital of which seems cruel, may be termed a miracle, but that he should through all keep his reason unshaken and mind unshadowed, is a mystery as nameless as it is unaccountable."

We are glad to be able to state that Mr. Robbins is fast recovering, and that he is gaining in health and vigor, and in wishing him many years more of life and prosperity, we form scarcely a link to the great chain of friends, who wish for him the same, and no less heartily."

A FAREWELL.

There was a pleasant gathering of young friends at the residence of Mr. Z. Schnell, on Milton avenue last evening, the occasion being the departure of Miss Bessie Swan, whose family were to leave the city to-day to make their home McGregor, Iowa. The evening was made a joyous one, despite the regret which all felt that Miss Swan was so soon to leave them. The hours were spent in social gaiety, games, and music, and at a suitable hour refreshments were served. One of the pleasing incidents of the occasion was the presentation to Miss Swan of an elegant perfume case, filled already for use. It was a beautiful little souvenir, and the friends who gave it found an able spokesman in Emmett McGowan. Miss Swan gave some excellent music on the piano, as did also Miss Bertha Schnell, and the other features of the evening gathering were varied and pleasing. Miss Swan's many friends here will miss her greatly, and join heartily with the other friends of the family in wishing to one and all of them equally true friends in their new home.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF GAS.

OFFICE OF NEW GAS LIGHT CO., OF JANESVILLE, JANESVILLE, WIS., APRIL 25, 1890.

To the Gas Consumers and Citizens of Janesville:

Owing to the decided increase in the consumption of gas following the several reductions in price made from time to time in the past, we have determined to make a further reduction by making the rate of gas on and after May 1, 1890, $2.60 per thousand feet. The bills will be made at $3.00 per thousand, as has been the case for the past year, but the discount for prompt payment will be forty cents per thousand, instead of twenty cents as heretofore.

We will continue this year, as we have for the last two years, to lay service pipes from the main pipe in the street, into the houses free of charge.

We will supply our consumers with any of the various styles of gas stoves and fixtures, at cost.
